A. Higher Education and the Poor in Asia: Christian Responses to Issues on Poverty and Justice –

Kumar Aryal, Michael Carino, Tom Roxas

This resource track seeks to contribute to the on-going discourses among scholars, thinkers, educators, and clergy, regarding one of the biggest problems in Asia. We will explore different facets of poverty in Asia, faith-based paradigms toward integrated ministries to the poor, effective organizational models that champion poverty alleviation and community development, and challenges for institutions of higher education in developing curricula for leadership formation that address poverty in the Asian context.

B. Integrated Learning in Differing Educational Modalities –

Michael Truong

This track will provide practical strategies and examples of what integrated learning may look like and how it may be delivered in onsite, blended, and online classes. It will further offer opportunity to explore how these innovative modalities may remove factors that may otherwise create barriers and subsequent disparity in access to people seeking holistic education.
